

An island with the hotel you don't want to stay at.

GOLI OTOK

Guide to the history of the camp

Goli otok is the most known uninhabited island in Croatia. During the second half of the 20th Century it had served as an internment camp for political reeducation, then as a prison. The buildings on the island are monuments of the past events which have been falling apart for decades, despite the great interest of the visitors. The ill-famed name of the island is a popular metaphor still nowadays.

To establish a culture of remembrance based on scientific research, the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung Office Croatia and Documenta – Center for Dealing with the Past, have published a historical guide to the Goli Otok internment camp.

We are pleased to invite you to the panel presentation on Thursday, July 9, 2020 from 11 am to 12 pm at Novinarski dom, Perkovičeva ulica 2, Zagreb.

The number of participants is limited in accordance with epidemiological regulations.

To attend the presentation, please send the email to: blanka.smoljan@fes.hr

The participation list will be created in order of application. A successful registration will be confirmed by the email.

Panel participants:

dr. Boris Stamenić,
co-author, coordinator of the Culture of Remembrance programme at Documenta

dr. Martin Previšić, co-author, lecturer at
the History Department, University of Zagreb

dr. Renata Jambrešić Kirin, Senior researcher at the Institute of Ethnology and Folklore
Research

Ivo Pejaković,
Director of the Jasenovac
Memorial Centre